The first shad caught in the Columbia river, by one of George W. Hume's fishermen, in 1880, weighed about two pounds and made a breakfast at the Occidental for A. J. Negler and D. C. Ireland. The Daily Astorian thatevening proclaimed the conting fish of the Columbia—the shad. Now our mighty river beats the working record for them, and no salmon have been lost in the deal. Both are royal table fishes.

INDIAN CREEK BRIDGE.

County Judge Blakely and Commis-sioners Harriman and Hibbard examined the Indian creek bridge last Friday and decided to replace the present structure with a new one. Bids will be called for to put in a bridge four feet above the grade of the present bridge. This will require considerable filling in at each end, and will lower the grade at both ends of the structure, making an improvement over the present poor piece of road.

But the question is asked, why not build the new bridge at feast 10 feet above the present one? Why have any grade in this part of the road at all? If the improvement ordered by the county court is made, it will be years before anything better is done. There is more travel over this bridge than any other in the county. It is in the hands of the people who use this road to petition for what they want. If the county court refuses the request, the West Siders could well afford to do the work by popular subscription, as did the people of the East Side.

Hood River pays plenty of taxes, why not have a good bridge over Indian
